(By International News Service)
London, Aug. 28.—Censored dispatches reveal that the allies are making a superhuman defense against the unceasing German avalanche on the center and right wing. Indications are that British reinforcements are preparing for a rear attack on the German right.

The Germans are rushing more so-called "ship funnel" siege guns to the front.

German Onrush Not Stemmed.
The "Daily Express" correspondent states: "There is no evidence that the German onrush is being stemmed."

German aviators with bombs are blowing up the trenches of the allies.

The London newspapers are gloomy and are questioning methods of the allies in conducting the war, but seeing hope in Russia's successes.

The "Times" says: "Indiscriminate censorship of the news is weakening the confidence of the public."

GERMANY PLANS TO CAPTURE U. S.

Prussian General Staff Officer Tells How It Could

LAND, NOT SEA, OPERATIONS

General Von Edelsheim Says the American Army is Small and the Militia Untrained and Armed With Muzzle Loaders—Declares Germany Would Need Few Troops to Subdue Us.

(SPECIAL TO THE PROGRESS)
Germany invading the United States, seizing the principal cities, holding the great railways until the country was starved out—this seems a flight of wild imagination to Americans. Such is just the plan outlined by General von Edelsheim in a recent book. He is no hare-brained Pan-German either, but a member of the Prussian general staff. Here is his memorandum:

"Operations against the United States of North America would have to be conducted in a different manner from those against England. During last year's political friction with that state, especially friction arising from commercial causes, has not been lacking and the difficulties that have arisen have mostly been settled by our giving way. As this obliging attitude has its limits, we have to ask ourselves what force we can possibly bring in order to meet the attacks of the United States against our interests and to impose our will. Our fleet will probably be able to defeat the naval forces of the United States, which are distributed over two oceans and over long distances. But it would be a mistake to suppose that the fleet will force the United States with its immense resources, into concluding peace.

"In view of the small number of American merchantmen, in view of the small value of the American colonies, which are not even pacified, in view of the excellent fortifications with which the great American seaports are provided, and which cannot be taken except with very heavy losses, and in view of the large number of American seaports, all of which we cannot blockade at the same time, our fleet has no means to force that opponent through successful maritime operations to conclude a peace."

BIG DAY FOR A. O. U. W. NEXT WEDNESDAY EVENING

Next Wednesday evening, Sept. 2, will be a big time for Anchor lodge, No. 245, Ancient Order United Workmen. On that date in the Knights of Pythias hall, the last ten of the class of 50 organized by Deputy Grand Organizer Frank R. Callahan will be initiated. A class of ladies has been added to the original 50 members, the lodge decided to add to its ranks when Organizer Callahan came to Clearfield and as a compliment to the ladies and the members who have helped make the organizing of the class a success the grand master workman, Hon. Ed E. Hohman, will be here next Wednesday and bring with him a degree team and put on the simplified work in its entirety. This of itself will be a treat to the new members and will be enjoyed by the old members as well. The entertainment committee says there will be something to eat for the members and invited guests.

The Hon. Ed. E. Hohman is one of the most widely known men in organizations of this kind and it will be well worth the time spent to hear what he will have to say on the occasion. Invitations limited to the capacity of the lodge room will be issued to the public. Anyone desiring to be present can notify Mr. Martin, at the post office, or the organizer at the same place as they can arrange to take care of them.

National Encampment S. W. V.
The national encampment of the Spanish war veterans will be held at Louisville, Ky., from August 31, to Sept 3. It is expected that 20,000 veterans will be present at the reunion.

Mines are Nearing England

(By International News Service)
London, Aug. 28.—A floating mine has penetrated the fishing fleet off Blythe in Northumberland, sinking one vessel.

The survivors landed at Hull.

These floating mines were placed in the North Sea by the Germans.

HOW ZEPPELINGS DROP BOMBS ON THEIR ENEMIES

London, Aug. 28.—The method used by Zeppelin airships in dropping bombs has been described as follows by an English refugee, who has just arrived here from Belgium:

"The dirigible hovers over its objective at a sufficient altitude to keep it out of range of the enemy's guns. At the same time it lowers a steel cage, attached to a steel wire rope, 2000 or 3000 feet long. This cage is divided into compartments, and it carries one man, whose duty it is to throw down the bombs."

"The cage is sufficiently strong to make rifle fire against it ineffective, and because of its small size and the fact that it is kept constantly in motion, it is very difficult for heavy guns to hit it."

AUTOIST PAYS FINE FOR KILLING GIRL

Wilmington, Aug. 28.—Walter M. Elliot, an attorney, who several months ago ran down and killed Miss Charlotte Kiess while driving his auto at what was said to be a high speed, today pleaded nolo contendere to the charge of involuntary manslaughter.

The plea was made at the consent of the court, and in addition to paying the fine and cost, Elliot paid a sum to the parents of the girl.

KAISER'S ENVOY SCORES ENGLAND ON RETURN HERE

THOUSANDS ATTEND THE PICNIC AT FRUIT HILL

Fruit Hill was the mecca for thousands of Clearfield county people on Thursday, the drawing card being the annual picnic of the Presbyterians. Many Clearfield citizens wound their way to Fruit Hill, traveling by automobiles, buggies and wagons.

The day was an ideal picnic day, and the immense crowd enjoyed every hour of it. The Smoke Band discoursed music for the occasion, the pastor of the Presbyterian church of Fruit Hill made a speech and introduced other speakers, the principal address being made by Rev. Dr. Bell Neff, of DuBois, who has occupied the platform at this picnic for several years and who always gives pleasure to those who listen to him.

There were candidates present—in fact, nearly all of them were on the ground shaking hands, and securing promises of votes. When night came a tired but happy lot of people proceeded to their homes, resolving to remember the date of the next Fruit Hill picnic.

KING ALBERT OF THE BELGIANS

Ruler of Distressed Country Has Good Record as Soldier

HE HAS VISITED IN AMERICA

Has Been in the Field Ever Since He Defied Germany's Demand That the Kaiser's Troops Pass Through Belgium on Their Way to the French Frontier.

(SPECIAL TO THE PROGRESS)
The brilliant soldierly record of King Albert of the Belgians in this war has astonished the world as much as has the bravery of the Belgians, who defended Liege so valorously against the Germans. A month ago neither the Belgian army nor the king had any particular reputation as fighters. The world knew little of King Albert. His father, King Leopold, was almost always in the limelight for one cause or another, but Albert has lived rather quietly.

Belgium has belonged to the Belgians only since 1830 when the people carried out a successful revolution against Holland, by whom they had been ruled.

When the country was invaded by Napoleon I on one side, and by England and Germany on the other for the battle of Waterloo in 1815, the people did not defend their country. There was no cry of neutrality being violated. The difference is now that the Belgians are fighting for their own.

King Albert does not belong to them by any bond of blood. He is the grandson of the first king of the Belgians, a German prince of Saxe-Coburg-Goths, who was invited to rule as Leopold I. His sovereignty lasted 34 years and that of his son Leopold II lasted for 44 years. King Albert ascended the throne in 1909.

The king and Queen Elisabeth have had to sacrifice their nearest and dearest family ties to remain loyal to Belgium during this war. Both are as German as centuries of German blood can make them. The queen who is the daughter of Duke Carl Theodor, of Bavaria, one of the most celebrated eye specialists of his generation, is the name-sake and god-daughter of her aunt, the murdered Empress Elizabeth of Austria, who was assassinated at Geneva. She has up to now maintained the most cordial relations with her aged uncle, Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria-Hungary.

King Albert, on his side, has many ties in Germany. His mother was Princess of Hohenzollern, of the famous Prussian family.

AVIS CAR SHOP PIONEER TO BE HELD TONIGHT

The New York Central freight house and the local merchants generally will be closed tomorrow at noon on account of the big picnic. Still, the annual picnic of the Avis Car Shop, one of the employees of the New York Central, near Jersey Shore, is held at this park, but the car shop people decided to come to Clearfield this year.

A special train of three coaches, headed by two engines, will bring the shopmen and the Jersey Shore band to Clearfield, arriving about noon. It is expected that about 1000 people will come in this train, and the local employees will participate in the festivities at the Dutchman's park.

REV. ROBERT C. PETERS

PENN'A

COL. ROOSEVELT DESCRIBES STRANGE, WILD TRIBE OF BRAZIL

Naked Nhamiquaras Entirely
at Their Ease—Like
Friendly Animals.

Straws Protrude From Holes
Pierced in Nose and Upper
Lip of the Men.

Colonel Roosevelt's sixth article
describing his journey in the Brazilian Amazon to Scribner's Magazine for September, 1914, by Charles
C. (The Sun.)

COLONEL ROOSEVELT narrates
his journey "With a Mule Train Across Nhamiquara Land" in
the Brazilian wilderness. The Nhamiquaras are a strange, wild tribe,
entirely naked, friendly and kindly.
Colonel says that "Nowhere in Africa did we come across wilder or more friendly primitive savages." Of this people he says:

"They were a laughing, easy tempered, and the women were as well
as the men and were obviously treated from the savage standpoint. There was no male brutality
of that which forms such a revolting
feature in the life of the Australian tribes, and although to a somewhat less degree, in the life of so many
tribes and Indian tribes.

"They were practically absolutely naked. In many savage tribes the men go absolutely naked, but the women
wear a breech cloth or loin cloth. In some tribes we saw near Lake Victoria, and on the upper White Nile, both men and women were practically naked. Among these Nhami-quaras the women were more completely naked than the men, although the difference was not essential. The men wore a string around the waist. Most of them wore nothing else, but a few
had loosely hanging from this string in front a scanty tuft of dried grass or a small piece of cloth, which, however,
was of purely symbolic use so far as
either protection or modesty was concerned. The women did not wear a string of any kind anywhere on their bodies. They did not have on so much as a string or a head or even an ornament in their hair. They were all—men and women, boys and well grown
young girls—as entirely at ease and unconscious as so many friendly animals.

A Sociable Lot.

"All of them—men, women and children, laughing and talking—crowded
around us, whether we were on horseback or on foot. They flocked into the house and when I sat down to write surrounded me so closely that I had to push them gently away. The women and girls often stood holding one another's hand or with their arms
over one another's shoulders or around
one another's waists, offering an attractive picture.

"The men had holes pierced through

the septum of the nose and through
the upper lip and wore a straw
through each hole. The women were not marked or mutilated.

"It seems like a contradiction in terms, but it is nevertheless a fact that the behavior of these completely naked women and men was entirely modest."

Ready to Descend Duvida.

Describing his preparations for the journey down the River of Doubt, Colonel Roosevelt says:

"Rondon, Lyra, the doctor, Cherrie,
Kermit and I, with sixteen paddlers
in seven canoes, were to descend the Duvida and find out whether it led
into the Gy-Parana, into the Madeira or into the Tapajoes. If within a few days it led into the Gy-Parana our purpose was to return and descend the Amazon, whose outlet was also unknown.

"Having this in view, we left a fort-night's provisions for our party of six
at Bonafacio. We took with us provisions for about fifty days—not full rations,
for we hoped, in part, to live on
the country, on fish, game, nuts and palm tops. Our personal baggage was already well cut down. Cherrie, Kermit and I took the naturalist's kit to
sleep under and a very light little tent
extra for any one who might fall sick.
Rondon, Lyra and the doctor took one
of their own tents.

"The things that we carried were
necessaries—food, medicines, bedding,
instruments for determining the altitude and longitude and latitude—except a few books, each in small compact. Lyra's were in German, consisting of two tiny volumes of Goethe
and Schiller; Kermit's were in Portuguese; mine, all in English. Included
the last two volumes of Gibbon, the
plays of Sophocles, More's 'Utopia,' Marcus Aurelius and Epictetus, the
two latter lent me by a friend, Major Shipton of the regulars, our military
attache at Buenos Aires."

Not Armed For Sport.

"If our canoe voyage was prosperous
we would gradually lighten the loads
by eating the provisions. If we met with accidents, such as losing canoes
and men in the rapids or by Indians
or encountered over much fever and
dysentery, the loads would lighten themselves.

"We were all armed. We took no cartridges for sport. Cherrie had some
to be used sparingly for collecting specimens. The officers were to be used—unless in the unlikely event of having to repel an attack—only to procure food.

"The food and the arms we carried represented all reasonable precautions
against suffering and starvation; but,
of course, if the course of the river
proved very long and difficult, if we
lost our boats over falls or in rapids
or had to make too many and too long portages or were brought to a halt by impassable swamps, then we would have to reckon with starvation as a possibility. Anything might happen.
"We were about to go into the unknown, and no one could say what it held."

Camp Fire Stories.

Campfire stories of the Roosevelt
party form part of the colonel's contribution to the September Scribner's.
He tells the following:

"Round the campfire Colonel Rondon
happened to mention how the brother
of one of the soldiers with us—a Pa-
raresi Indian—had been killed by a jara-ra snake. Cherrie told of a narrow escape he had from one while collecting in Guiana. At night he used to set traps in camp for small mammals.
One night he heard one of these traps go off under his hammock. He reached down for it, and as he fumbled for
the chain he felt a snake strike at him,
just missing him in the darkness, but actually brushing his hand. He lit a light and saw that a big jararaca had
been caught in the trap, and he preserved it as a specimen.

"Snakes frequently came into his camp after nightfall. He killed one rattlesnake which had swallowed the skinned bodies of four mice he had prepared as specimens, which shows
that rattlesnakes do not always feed
only on living prey.

"Another rattlesnake which he killed
in Central America had just swallowed an opossum which proved to be
of a species new to science.

"Miller told how once on the Orinoco
he saw on the bank a small anaconda,
some ten feet long, killing one of the
iguanas, big, active, truculent, carnivorous lizards, equally at home on the land and in the water. Evidently the
iguanas were digging out holes in the bank in which to lay their eggs, for
there were several such holes and iguanas working at them. The snake had crushed its prey to a pulp, and not more than a couple of feet away another iguana was still busily and with entire unconcern engaged in making its burrow. At Miller's approach the anaconda left the dead iguana and
rushed into the water, and the live iguana promptly followed it.

"Miller also told of the stone gods
and altars and temples he had seen in
the great Colombian forests, monuments of strange civilizations which flourished and died out ages ago and
of which all memory has vanished."

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salt
before eating breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them
flush off the body's urinous waste or
you'll be a real sick person shortly.
At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water;
also get from any pharmacist four
ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined
with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys
and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent
lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists
here say they sell lots of Jad Salts
to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

An add in the Progress will rent or sell you house quicker than any real estate agents could, owing to our large circulation.

Mrs. J. L. Yoder, of Victor, Colorado, is visiting her mother, Mrs. W. P. Morris, at her home on Third street. Mrs. Norris, who has been seriously ill for the past six weeks, is getting along very nicely now.

THOSE who declare themselves to be in favor of trade-unions in the abstract but opposed to it in the concrete, are not unlike the western farmer who announced that he was unreservedly in favor of the construction of railroads but unalterably opposed to the running of trains. Trade-unions were formed for a definite purpose; they have well-defined policies and methods of procedure; they are great, democratic institutions administered by practical men who are earnestly and successfully striving for the amelioration of the conditions of the poor.—John Mitchell in The Atlantic.

RIG ED WELSH AND HIS NEW BASEBALL CURVE

BY FRANK G. MENKE

(By International News Service)

New York, Aug. 28.—There's an awful lot of mystery wrapped up around that new curve ball which "Big Ed" Walsh, of the White Sox, claims to have discovered, and by means of which he hopes to do a "come back" after more than a year in drydock.

As far as anybody has been able to figure out, that new twister of Walsh's is a loo-loo. Walsh himself has explained it, but not in detail. To do so would be to tip off every other pitcher in the league. Some of Ed's teammates have told about it, but their description of it is just as hazy as most of the cables that describe the European war.

The new curve, taking it from the fragmentary statements concerning it, first shoots to the left after leaving the hand, then shocks to the right. Half way between the pitcher and the home plate the ball stops for a second or two. If it is a warm day the ball pauses and cools itself off. If the day be cold the ball, after stopping, executes a few large whirls so as to keep itself warm.

Having cooled itself, or warmed itself, as the case may be, the ball proceeds on its journey, taking the outside course until near the plate, possibly in fear that a German cruise is lurking somewhere on the inside track ready to shoot the ball to Helen Wagonway.

Provided the ball reaches the vicinity of the plate in safety. It does several things. First of all it loops the loop four times. Then it drops, or it doesn't drop. It shoots right up into the air, shoots across the plate or it hits the player in the ribs, on the dome, or on his muddy muzzum, all according to Ed Walsh's aim.

Sometimes upon arriving at the plate the ball doesn't do all these things. Sometimes—well, you know Ty Cobb and them other fellows, Al.

John McGraw knows how Germany feels these days. John's plight is much like that of Manager Wilhelm who is trying to win the European pennant despite some furious opposition. However, there's a difference. While Bill's army fights and advances, John's army seems to be more adept at the opposite tactics.

John has three foes besetting him—the Braves, the Cubs and the Cards. And John realizes that he is fighting with his spinal column against the wall paper. He's unloaded his big-gun guns, he's rallied his men, he's cursed 'em, praised 'em, and done everything that's possible for a good little general to do. But his army hasn't responded to the call of duty with and noticeable enthusiasm.

In other years when John was harassed by the enemy, he just outnumbered his artillery and had his three main pieces—Mathewson, Tesreau and Marquand—shoot the opposition full of holes. To check the water, John would lead his infantry with drawn bats into the thick of the fray and have them club the enemy into submission.

But this year it seems a bit different. John has called on his artillery but the fire of late seems to be shooting nothing but blank cartridges. As for John's infantry, led by Capt. Doyle, Lieut. Merkle and Corporal Burns—well, something seems to be the matter with his hearing. John keeps yelling at it to charge, but they seem to get things twisted and have executed a beautiful retreat during the past few weeks.

London, Aug. 27.—Reports that six out of the eight Zeppelin dirigibles connected with the kaiser's military forces have been destroyed, have led the aged Count Zeppelin to offer to the kaiser his services to operate one of the big aerial fighting machines. The count, who is now seventy years old, declares that it is entirely due to the inefficiency of the men operating the machines that so many of them have been destroyed by the allies guns.

fly of the kaiser. His sister is the wife of Prince Charles of Hohenzollern, a kinsman of the kaiser, who lives in Berlin and is helping the Germans to plan the control of Belgium. King Albert's most intimate friends have been the German crown prince and the other sons of the kaiser.

The king has been with his soldiers in the field, since he gave his defiant reply to the kaiser's demand to give German troops free passage through his country. The royal palace at Laeken, where King Leopold spent a large fortune on the gardens alone, has been turned over to the Red Cross in which the queen herself has been enrolled. She is a regular graduate nurse and holds a doctor's certificate also. King Albert is thirty-nine years old and Queen Elizabeth a year younger. Many Americans have met the king. He spent several months in this country sixteen years ago.

He had dinner in Washington with President McKinley, was entertained at Newport, by Mrs. Potter Palmer and spent considerable time in New York. In St. Louis he spent three days incognito at a hotel as "John Banks, New York."

He has a private fortune of some twenty odd millions besides a sufficiently liberal grant made by the Belgian government.

He and Queen Elizabeth did not have any formal coronation such as other sovereigns have, following the example of Leopold II who gave to the people the large sum, many thousands of dollars, for which they had been taxed, to pay for the coronation. The new king and queen, however, had a state entry into Brussels the day before Christmas five years ago, when the cannon boomed a salute and droes of thousands of their subjects thronged the streets to receive their new rulers. They have three children, Prince Leopold, Prince Charles and little Princess Marie.

The king and queen have been very democratic, easily accessible to all classes of society and they have become so popular that the Socialists who used to demand a republic for Belgium are now seldom heard from.

"The Red Widow."

"The Red Widow," the sparkling musical play which came direct from the Broadway breaking run at the Astor New York, is the opera house Thursday, September 3, is the first time in the history of the musical play in this city.

"The Red Widow," Cicero Hammett Butts, is a retired millionaire, manufacturer of Yonkers, N. Y. U. S. A. He is also a colonel in the National Guards with, to hear him tell it, an international reputation as an army tactician. In London, where he has arrived on a tour around the world, he meets Anna Varvara (the Red Widow) Anna's fascinating and flirty; also she is a member of a band of blood-thirsty nihilists who are seeking the life of the czar a fact that Cicero does not discover until he has had some of the most exciting experiences of his life while endeavoring to escape from the Russian police web in which he became entangled through his infatuation for the female nihilist.

RUSSIANS PUSH ON TO BERLIN

Posen between the Warta and the river Oder.

Bottle Up Garrison.

Of the enormous forces that will be in the field it is reported to be the general plan of the Russian offensive not to try to take the German chain of main forts by storm. Instead the Russians will attempt to isolate each of them, leaving a large enough force at every point to keep the garrisons bottled up and also to prevent any attacks on their flanks or their own lines of communication.

The Russian advance is almost unopposed now, being in strong contrast to the first week of the campaign, when the Russian forces were fighting almost continuously.

Important victories have been won by the Russian troops, according to correspondents, but the Russian general staff has given out such brief reports from the front that only military men can estimate the importance of the successful Russian campaign.

Can Arm 20,000,000 More Men.

London, Aug. 28.—A dispatch to the Post from St. Petersburg comments on the excellence of the Russian army and the inexhaustible supply of men to draw upon. It says further:

"Russia will have no difficulty in finding 20,000,000 men to complete the work begun by its trained fighting forces. Moreover, this is the first time in the memory of men that the Russian army has taken the field with adequate equipment and a sufficiency of supplies, under officers trained in the hard lesson so thoroughly learned in the Japanese campaign."

GERMAN ONRUSH CANNOT BE STEMED

10,000 British Reported Killed. Germans reaching Courtrai report that 10,000 British were killed in the fighting in Belgium.

Premier Asquith this morning announced that parliament will adjourn on Monday, probably for ten days.

Force Germans to Retire.

Paris, Aug. 28.—The following official bulletin was issued by the war office last night:

"In the Vosges district our troops today resumed the offensive and drove back the Germans who yesterday had forced them to retire on the St. Die side.

The Germans yesterday bombarded St. Die, which is an unfortified town.

"In the region between the Vosges and Nancy our offensive movement has continued uninterruptedly for five days. The German losses have been considerable; 2500 bodies were found on a front of three kilometers (nearly two miles) southeast of Nancy and 4500 bodies on a front of four kilometers in the region of Vitrimont."

Half the Garrison Killed.

"Longwy, a very old fortress, the garrison of which consisted of only one battalion, which had been bombarded August 3, capitulated yesterday, after holding out over twenty-four days. More than half of the garrison was killed or wounded. Lieutenant Colonel Darche, governor of Longwy, has been nominated an officer of the Legion of Honor for heroic conduct in the defense of Longwy."

Germans Repulsed on Meuse.

"On the Meuse our troops have repulsed with great vigor several German attacks. A German flag was taken.

"The Belgian field army attached to Namur and a French regiment which supported it have joined our lines.

"In the north the British have attacked forces greatly superior in number, and were obliged, after brilliant resistance, to withdraw a little in the rear on their right.

"Our armies maintained their positions in Belgium. The army of Antwerp, by its offensive, has drawn off and held before it several German divisions."

French Claim Success.

The war office maintains that the French have been successful in the Vosges campaign. Seven thousand German dead were alleged to have been seen in one district there after a French victory.

Longwy, the Iron gate to France surrendered yesterday to the Germans only after half the little garrison were destroyed, says a statement.

Paris has ordered its surrender by wireless.

British Troops Change Position.

CLEVELAND'S WIDOW AMONG MISSING AMERICAN TOURISTS IN EUROPE.

Mrs. T. J. Preston.
London, Aug. 28.—In spite of all efforts made by Ambassador Gerard at Berlin to locate Mrs. T. J. Preston her husband and her three children, no trace of the missing Americans has yet been found. Mrs. Preston, now the wife of Prof. Preston, of Princeton, was Mrs. Grover Cleveland. Prof. Preston went into the interior of Germany early in the spring to do some research work for his university. Since the war broke out, not one of the members of the family have been heard from.

London, Aug. 28.—The British press bureau at 12.30 o'clock this morning gave out the following statement: "The French operations of war over a distance of some 250 miles have necessitated certain changes in the position of our troops, who are now occupying a strong line to meet the German advance, supported by the French army on both flanks.

"The morals of both armies appear to be excellent and there is little doubt that they will give good account of themselves in the positions they now hold."

GERMANY PLANS TO CAPTURE U. S.

peace on our terms.

"The possibility must be taken into account that the fleet of the United States will at first not venture into battle, but that it will withdraw into fortified harbors, in order to wait for a favorable opportunity of achieving minor successes. Therefore it is clear that naval action alone will not be decisive against the United States, but that the combined action of navy and army will be required. Considering the great extent of the United States, the conquest of the country by an army of invasion is not possible. But there is every reason to believe that victorious enterprises on the Atlantic coast and the conquest of the most important arteries through which imports and exports pass, will create such an unbearable state of affairs in the whole country that the government will readily offer acceptable conditions in order to obtain peace.

"If Germany begins preparing a fleet of transports and troops for landing purposes at the moment when the battle fleet steams out of our harbors we may conclude that operations on American soil can begin after about four weeks, and it cannot be doubted that the United States will not be able to oppose to us within that time an army equivalent to our own.

"At present the regular army of the United States amounts to 65,000 men, of whom about 30,000 could be disposed of. Of these at least 10,000 are required for watching the Indian territories and for guarding the fortifications on the sea coast. Therefore only about 20,000 men of the regular army are ready for war. Besides, about 100,000 militia are in existence, of whom the larger part did not come up when they were called out during the last year. Lastly the militia is not efficient, it is partly armed with muzzle loaders and its training is worse than its armament.

"As an operation by surprise against America is impossible, on account of the length of time during which the transports are on the way, only the landing can be effected by surprise. Nevertheless, stress must be laid on the fact that the rapidity of the invasion will considerably facilitate victory against the United States, owing to the absence of methodical preparation for mobilization, owing to the inexperience of the personnel, and owing to the weakness of the regular army.

"In order to occupy permanently a considerable part of the United States and to protect our lines of operation so as to enable us to fight successfully against all forces which that country, in the course of time, can oppose to us, considerable forces would be required. Such an operation would be greatly hampered by the fact that it would require a second passage of the transport fleet in order to ship the necessary troops that long distance. However, it seems questionable whether it would be advantageous to occupy a great stretch of the country for a considerable time. The Americans will not feel inclined to conclude peace because one or two provinces are occupied by an army of invasion, but because of the enormous material losses which the whole country will suffer if the Atlantic harbor towns, in which the threads of the whole prosperity of the United States are concentrated are torn away from them one after the other.

"Therefore the task of the fleet would be to undertake a series of large landing operations, through which we are able to take several of these important and wealthy towns within a brief space of time. By interrupting their communications, by destroying all buildings serving the state, commerce and the defense, by taking away all material for war and transport, and, lastly, by levying heavy contributions, we should be able to inflict damage on the United States.

"For such enterprises a small military force will suffice. Nevertheless, the American defense will find it difficult to undertake a successful enterprise against that kind of warfare. Though an extremely well developed railway system enables them to concentrate troops within a short time on the different points on the coast, the concentration of the troops and the time which is lost until it is recognized which of the many threatened points of landing will really be utilized will, as a rule, make it possible for the army of invasion to carry out its operations with almost under the cooperation of the fleet of the point chosen. The corps landed can either take the offensive against gathering hostile forces or withdraw the transports to land of another place.

"It should be said that Germany is the only great power which is able to tackle the United States single handed. England could be victorious on sea, but would not be able to protect Canada, where the Americans could find consolation for their defeat at sea. On the other great powers now possess a fleet of transports required for such an operation."

Notice is hereby given That application will be made to the Public Service Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, by the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania for a certificate of public convenience, evidencing the Commission's approval of an agreement with the Penn Public Service Company for the joint use of poles the public hearing on which will be held in the room of the Commission at Harrisburg, at 10 A. COL. ROOSEVELT DESCRIBES STRANGE, WILD TRIBE OF BRAZIL

at Their Ease—Like
Friendly Animals.

Straws Protrude From Holes
Pierced in Nose and Upper
Lip of the Men.

Colonel Roosevelt's sixth article
describing his journey in the Brazilian Amazon to Scribner's Magazine for September, 1914, by Charles
C. (See's) Ross.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT narrates
his journey "With a Mule Train Across Nhamiquara Land" in
the Brazilian wilderness. The Nhamiquaras are a strange, wild tribe,
entirely naked, friendly and kindly.
Colonel Roosevelt says that "Nowhere in Africa did we come across wilder or more completely primitive savages." Of these people he says:

"They were a laughing, easy temper-
ed, and the women were as well
as the men and were obviously
treated from the savage standpoint. There was no male brutality
of that which forms such a revolting
feature in the life of the Australian
tribes, and, although to a some-
what less degree, in the life of so many
tribes and Indian tribes.

"They were practically absolutely
naked. In many savage tribes the men
go absolutely naked, but the women
wear a breech cloth or loin cloth. In some tribes we saw near Lake Victoria, and on the upper White Nile, both men and women were practically naked. Among these Nhami-quaras the women were more completely naked than the men, although the
difference was not essential. The men wore a string around the waist. Most
of them wore nothing else, but a few
had loosely hanging from this string in front a scanty tuft of dried grass or a
small piece of cloth, which, however,
was of purely symbolic use so far as
either protection or modesty was concerned. The women did not wear a cloth of any kind anywhere on their bodies. They did not have on so much as a string or a head or even an ornament in their hair. They were all—
men and women, boys and well grown
young girls—as entirely at ease and unconscious as so many friendly animals.

A Sociable Lot.

"All of them—men, women and children, laughing and talking—crowded
around us, whether we were on horseback or on foot. They looked into the bushes and when I sat down to write surrounded me so closely that I had
to push them gently away. The women
and girls often stood holding one
another's hand or with their arms
over one another's shoulders or around
one another's waists, offering an attractive picture.

"The men had holes pierced through

the septum of the nose and through
the upper lip and wore a straw
through each hole. The women were
not marked or mutilated.

"It seems like a contradiction in
terms, but it is nevertheless a fact
that the behavior of these completely
naked women and men was entirely
modest."

Ready to Descend Duvida.

Describing his preparations for the
journey down the River of Doubt, Colonel Roosevelt says:

"Rondon, Lyra, the doctor, Cherrie,
Kermit and I, with sixteen paddlers
in seven canoes, were to descend the Duvida and find out whether it led
into the Gy-Parana, into the Madeira
or into the Tapajoes. If within a few days it led into the Gy-Parana our
purpose was to return and descend the Amazon, whose outlet was also unknown.

"Having this in view, we left a fort-
night's provisions for our party of six
at Bonafacio. We took with us provisions for about fifty days—not full rations,
for we hoped, in part, to live on
the country, on fish, game, nuts and
palm tops. Our personal baggage was already well cut down. Cherrie, Kermit
and I took the naturalist's kit to
sleep under and a very light little tent
extra for any one who might fall sick.
Rondon, Lyra and the doctor took one
of their own tents.

"The things that we carried were
necessaries—food, medicines, bedding,
instruments for determining the altitude and longitude and latitude—except a few books, each in small compact. Lyra's were in German, consisting of two tiny volumes of Goethe
and Schiller; Kermit's were in Portuguese; mine, all in English. Included
the last two volumes of Gibbon, the
plays of Sophocles, More's 'Utopia,' Marcus Aurelius and Epictetus, the
two latter lent me by a friend, Major Shipton of the regulars, our military
attache at Buenos Aires."

Not Armed For Sport.

"If our canoe voyage was prosperous
we would gradually lighten the loads
by eating the provisions. If we met
with accidents, such as losing canoes
and men in the rapids or by Indians
or encountered over much fever and
dysentery, the loads would lighten
themselves.

"We were all armed. We took no cartridges for sport. Cherrie had some
to be used sparingly for collecting

specimens. The officers were to be used—unless in the unlikely event of
having to repel an attack—only to procure food.

"The food and the arms we carried
represented all reasonable precautions
against suffering and starvation; but,
of course, if the course of the river
proved very long and difficult, if we
lost our boats over falls or in rapids
or had to make too many and too long portages or were brought to a halt by
impassable swamps, then we would
have to reckon with starvation as a possibility. Anything might happen.
"We were about to go into the unknown, and no one could say what it
held."

Camp Fire Stories.

Campfire stories of the Roosevelt
party form part of the colonel's contribution to the September Scribner's.
He tells the following:

"Round the campfire Colonel Rondon
happened to mention how the brother
of one of the soldiers with us—a Pa-
raresi Indian—had been killed by a jara-
ra snake. Cherrie told of a narrow escape he had from one while collecting in Guiana. At night he used to set traps in camp for small mammals.
One night he heard one of these traps
go off under his hammock. He reached down for it, and as he fumbled for
the chain he felt a snake strike at him,
just missing him in the darkness, but actually brushing his hand. He lit a light and saw that a big jararaca had
been caught in the trap, and he preserved it as a specimen.

"Snakes frequently came into his
camp after nightfall. He killed one rattlesnake which had swallowed the
skinned bodies of four mice he had
prepared as specimens, which shows
that rattlesnakes do not always feed
only on living prey.

"Another rattlesnake which he killed
in Central America had just swal-
lowed an opossum which proved to be
of a species new to science.

"Miller told how once on the Orinoco
he saw on the bank a small anaconda,
some ten feet long, killing one of the
iguanas, big, active, truculent, carnivorous lizards, equally at home on the land and in the water. Evidently the
iguanas were digging out holes in the
bank in which to lay their eggs, for
there were several such holes and
iguanas working at them. The snake
had crushed its prey to a pulp, and not
more than a couple of feet away an-
other iguana was still busily and with
entire unconcern engaged in making
its burrow. At Miller's approach the anaconda left the dead iguana and
rushed into the water, and the live
iguana promptly followed it.

"Miller also told of the stone gods
and altars and temples he had seen in
the great Colombian forests, monuments of strange civilizations which
flourished and died out ages ago and
of which all memory has vanished."

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salt
before eating breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get
sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of
lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the
bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them
flush off the body's urinous waste or
you'll be a real sick person shortly.
At first you feel a dull misery in the
kidney region, you suffer from back-
ache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water;
also get from any pharmacist four
ounces of Jad Salts, take a table-
spoonful in a glass of water before
breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of
grapes and lemon juice, combined
with lithia, and has been used for
generations to clean clogged kidneys
and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in
urine, so it no longer is a source of
irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent
lithia-water drink which everyone
should take now and then to keep the
kidneys clean and active. Druggists
here say they sell lots of Jad Salts
to folks who believe in overcoming
kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

We get the grip from Russia; the malarial fever from England; the measles from Germany, and France tolerates Jack Johnson—then why should we have any sympathy for any of them?

These school teachers who remain at home and studied the autobiography of Noah Webster will be just as capable of teaching pupils how to spell as those who are worrying because the war has prevented them getting a bird's eye glimpse of the ancient ruins—inanimate and animate—in Europe.

SHEEP-KILLING DOGS. It is estimated that the dogs of Pennsylvania have killed by the end of the present year fifty thousand dollars worth of sheep in the twelve months. That is, the counties of the state will have paid that amount to sheep raisers by the end of the present year. This waste of such a valuable animal as the sheep could be prevented if sheep-killing dogs were to be put away where they belong—into the sheep-pen.

are entirely too many worthless curs in this state, and somebody should devise a means whereby those dogs which kill sheep and commit other depredations might be exterminated.

A SMASHING BLOW.

The telegraphic news received by the Progress Thursday to the effect that the Germans had captured Lille and Valenciennes, the former within one hundred and twenty-five miles of Paris, was startling. Indeed, it was shocking to Great Britain, which has not appeared to realize that Germany had planned from the start to reach Paris and deal a blow to the French which would place that republic at the mercy of the kaiser.

In the absence of news from the line of battle it was supposed that the British and French were at least holding their own along the French border, but it appears that, with a few minor successes, the allies have been as helpless to stem the tide of German invasion as were the Belgians. In fact, Germany has been able to make much more progress in France than she did in Belgium, where she was confronted by an army much smaller than those which were supposed to be standing in her path in lower Belgium and France.

The German campaign was well planned and is being carried out with military precision. To dispose of the allies and then take her time to deal with Russia and her other enemies were the purposes of the Germans. She has crippled the allies and may crush all opposition to her march on to Paris, for France's management of her campaign has been woefully inefficient, while the English forces are much smaller than should have been placed in the path of the mass of German troops which is moving like an automaton through France. At present, therefore, Germany has won much, although at a heavy price.

SWAT THE FLY.

There are two seasons in the year when it is incumbent upon the people to swat the house fly. The first is in early summer when the fly first makes his appearance and the second is when he is preparing to take his departure for his winter vacation. It is evident that there were many flies killed last spring, but enough escape the swatting to propagate families which now prove annoying to housewives and others. If flies are killed now the number that will appear next spring will be considerably smaller than will be the case if no are swatted now.

The board of health of Clearfield borough has in mind the placing of few large fly traps on the streets of the town. If the board takes this action it will help very materially to reduce the size of the fly family. Comparatively few flies will be swatted by those citizens who realize the danger of the pests distributing disease germs throughout the town, the best plan to get rid of the pest is to prevent their multiplication by destroying their breeding places. Flies breed in filth. If the citizens will keep their own premises clean and report the uncleanness of their neighbor's premises the fly in time become a stranger to the borough. At this time of year it will be well for the board of health to that filth, rubbish, decayed vegetable and other matter which invite the pest and prove excellent breeding places removed or covered. If the citizens will do their duty in the premises and swat the fly and eliminate his breeding place Clearfield will in few years become a flyless town.

FRANCIS JOSEPH THE SADDEST FIGURE AMONG EUROPE'S RULERS

Aged Monarch Harried by Grim Misfortune From His Boyhood. "Unhappy Lies the Head That Wears a Crown" True In His Case.

It has fallen to the lot of few men to bear such a series of misfortunes as those that came to Francis Joseph (Charles) I., emperor of Austria, whose eighty-fourth birthday occurred Aug. 18. The reign of the oldest monarch in the world was one of woe and disaster. His most recent and most personal grief was caused by Gavrio Princip, the Serbian anarchist, whose bullets ended the life of the heir apparent, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenburg. But before this happened he had earned the title of the sorrowful Emperor.

Waiving the question of right or wrong in declaring war on Serbia, as the direct result of the assassination of Francis Ferdinand, the fact stands out that it was this act which plunged all of Europe into a bloody conflict, a conflict aptly described by the British government in its call for men to enlist under the Union Jack as the greatest war in the history of the world. From the day when as a boy of eighteen he was ordered by the family council to dethrone his uncle, since otherwise all hope for the house of Hapsburg was lost, Francis Joseph never knew a happy day. He has remained upon the throne of his country for over sixty-six years, the saddest monarch of his age.

Curse Over Family.

A curse, uttered with all the hatred and vindictiveness of a woman whose heart was torn with grief, hangs over the house of Hapsburg. Since this curse upon the emperor and his family was made in 1849 by the Countess Karolyi, the house of Hapsburg has known more grief than any other royal family of Europe.

Following the execution of her son for his activity in the Hungarian uprising, Countess Karolyi sought an audience with the emperor. Once in his presence she denounced him in the most scathing terms; she prayed that his life be stripped of happiness, that misery and suffering come to those nearest to him, and that he be crushed to the earth in despair. The woman's prayer was answered.

A political cataclysm set Francis Joseph on his throne as a boy and loaded him with responsibilities and grief such as only the strong can bear. Francis Joseph had hardly reached his throne when he was forced to lead his soldiers against his own people in the quelling of a bloody revolution. These events had hardly passed well into recollection when his natural ally made war on him, reduced him to humiliating peace and took a slice of his royalties.

Brother Executed in Mexico.

Francis Joseph was duped into permitting his brother to become the tool of Napoleon III. in a wild scheme to establish a Franco-Austrian monarchy in Mexico. The unhappy Empress Carotta went home begging Napoleon to let her defunct husband, and Maximilian himself was shot to death with a general's making a final tragic plea that they shoot low, so his mother might look upon his dead face unharmed.

Francis Joseph's Italian provinces revolted and joined the Italian king. Every few years there have been fresh outbreaks in his own country and again European wars threatened to engulf him and his kingdom, and he faced the possibility that his death would mean the dissolution of his remnant of the great German Roman empire, which he had ruled the world.

But to all these public disasters was added a list of private or personal griefs such as few men—high or low—have ever been made to bear. Perhaps the greatest of these tragedies and the one that bore most heavily on the old monarch, was the mysterious death of his only son, the Crown Prince Rudolf, at Mayerling. Rudolf was twenty-three years old when he married in 1881 Princess Stephanie, daughter of the king of the Belgians. The prince was sixteen when he married her for state reasons, and they became known as "the most unhappy royal couple in Europe."

The crown prince was invited to a reception at the home of a cousin, the Countess Larisch. That was in the fall of 1887. There the countess introduced him to a beautiful young woman, the Baroness Vetsera, nineteen years old.

The crown prince lost his head and heart. He went to his father, the emperor, and announced that he intended to divorce Stephanie and marry the young baroness, offering to renounce all claims to the throne. The emperor refused him permission to annul his marriage to Stephanie, but again was refused.

Several months later, through the findings of his family, the crown prince agreed to be reconciled to Stephanie, and a state reception was planned in honor of their reunion.

The Baroness Vetsera heard of this on the morning of the day for which a reception was planned. She went to the palace and, forcing her way past palace guards, gained access to the crown prince's room. There she flung herself at his feet, begging him not to desert her.

A Fatal Farewell. Rudolf's love for the baroness was vivid, and he agreed to meet her at night in a hunting chateau near by for a last farewell. When the royal family and guests assembled for the late dinner the crown prince could be found. After a wait of several hours word came that the bodies of Rudolf and the Baroness Vetsera had been found in a room in the chateau.

For many years the affair was shrouded in mystery. Only recently Countess Larisch tore away the veil in her book entitled "My Past." Her conclusion was that the lovers agreed to die together. Rudolf playing the baroness and then himself.

The widowed Stephanie fell in love with and married Count Elmer von Lay, a young nobleman. The crown princess lost her royal rank in Austria and her native country through her marriage.

Next in order the Archduke Johann Salvator fell in love with Mimi Stibel, a Viennese dancer, and was refused the right to marry her.

Finally, after a stormy interview with the emperor, the archduke wrote a terrific brochure against the Austrian army, resigned all his rank, took the name of John Orth and departed from Austria. In February, 1890, he met Mimi Stibel in London, where they were married. They set sail on the ship St. Margaritha for South America. The vessel was wrecked, and nothing authoritative has been heard of Salvator since.

Every few years stories have cropped out purporting to reveal the whereabouts of the lost archduke.

Tragic Death of Wife. As deep and long lived a grief as any borne by the emperor of sorrows came through his wife. At the outset it was a love match and for many years the emperor and his consort were ideally happy. The private lives of both always were above reproach. But as years crept upon her the Empress Elizabeth began to show the eccentricities that have beset all her line.

Austria and its emperor became distant to her, there were long absences, domestic scenes and gossip. Finally Elizabeth decided to make her own home and court. At an expense of $600,000 she built on the beautiful island of Cortu, in the Mediterranean, the remarkable castle of Achilleon. Beyond this sum she spent on the grounds and furnishings as much more.

The empress spent her winters, her autumns and springs at Cortu. The rest of her time she traveled. She had come from Cortu only a short time, and one day was walking in the sun on the quay at Genoa with an attendant. She was making her way along to a little boat that was to carry her to Montreux when a man darted out of a bevy, walked a moment near the empress and then slipped her through the body with a dagger.

She fell in a trickle of her blood. The man ran and for the time made his escape. They carried her aboard the boat, and there she died within half an hour, thrust through a vital spot with the dagger, which had been fastened to the old monarch, was the mysterious death of his only son, the Crown Prince Rudolf, at Mayerling. Rudolf was twenty-three years old when he married in 1881 Princess Stephanie, daughter of the king of the Belgians. THOSE who declare themselves to be in favor of trade-unions in the abstract but opposed to it in the concrete, are not unlike the western farmer who announced that he was unreservedly in favor of the construction of railroads but unalterably opposed to the running of trains. Trade-unions were formed for a definite purpose; they have well-defined policies and methods of procedure; they are great, democratic institutions administered by practical men who are earnestly and successfully striving for the amelioration of the conditions of the poor.—John Mitchell in The Atlantic.

RIG ED WELSH AND HIS NEW BASEBALL CURVE

BY FRANK G. MENKE

(By International News Service)

New York, Aug. 28.—There's an awful lot of mystery wrapped up around that new curve ball which "Big Ed" Walsh, of the White Sox, claims to have discovered, and by means of which he hopes to do a "come back" after more than a year in drydock.

As far as anybody has been able to figure out, that new twister of Walsh's is a loo-loo. Walsh himself has explained it, but not in detail. To do so would be to tip off every other pitcher in the league. Some of Ed's teammates have told about it, but their description of it is just as hazy as most of the cables that describe the European war.

The new curve, taking it from the fragmentary statements concerning it, first shoots to the left after leaving the hand, then shocks to the right. Half way between the pitcher and the home plate the ball stops for a second or two. If it is a warm day the ball pauses and cools itself off. If the day be cold the ball, after stopping, executes a few large whirls so as to keep itself warm.

Having cooled itself, or warmed itself, as the case may be, the ball proceeds on its journey, taking the outside course until near the plate, possibly in fear that a German cruise is lurking somewhere on the inside track ready to shoot the ball to Helen Wagonway.

Provided the ball reaches the vicinity of the plate in safety. It does several things. First of all it loops the loop four times. Then it drops, or it doesn't drop. It shoots right up into the air, shoots across the plate or it hits the player in the ribs, on the dome, or on his muddy muzzum, all according to Ed Walsh's aim.

Sometimes upon arriving at the plate the ball doesn't do all these things. Sometimes—well, you know Ty Cobb and them other fellows, Al.

John McGraw knows how Germany feels these days. John's plight is much like that of Manager Wilhelm who is trying to win the European pennant despite some furious opposition. However, there's a difference. While Bill's army fights and advances, John's army seems to be more adept at the opposite tactics.

John has three foes besetting him—the Braves, the Cubs and the Cards. And John realizes that he is fighting with his spinal column against the wall paper. He's unloaded his big-gun guns, he's rallied his men, he's cursed 'em, praised 'em, and done everything that's possible for a good little general to do. But his army hasn't responded to the call of duty with and noticeable enthusiasm.

In other years when John was harassed by the enemy, he just outnumbered his artillery and had his three main pieces—Mathewson, Tesreau and Marquand—shoot the opposition full of holes. To check the water, John would lead his infantry with drawn bats into the thick of the fray and have them club the enemy into submission.

But this year it seems a bit different. John has called on his artillery but the fire of late seems to be shooting nothing but blank cartridges. As for John's infantry, led by Capt. Doyle, Lieut. Merkle and Corporal Burns—well, something seems to be the matter with his hearing. John keeps yelling at it to charge, but they seem to get things twisted and have executed a beautiful retreat during the past few weeks.

London, Aug. 27.—Reports that six out of the eight Zeppelin dirigibles connected with the kaiser's military forces have been destroyed, have led the aged Count Zeppelin to offer to the kaiser his services to operate one of the big aerial fighting machines. The count, who is now seventy years old, declares that it is entirely due to the inefficiency of the men operating the machines that so many of them have been destroyed by the allies guns.

fly of the kaiser. His sister is the wife of Prince Charles of Hohenzollern, a kinsman of the kaiser, who lives in Berlin and is helping the Germans to plan the control of Belgium. King Albert's most intimate friends have been the German crown prince and the other sons of the kaiser.

The king has been with his soldiers in the field, since he gave his defiant reply to the kaiser's demand to give German troops free passage through his country. The royal palace at Laeken, where King Leopold spent a large fortune on the gardens alone, has been turned over to the Red Cross in which the queen herself has been enrolled. She is a regular graduate nurse and holds a doctor's certificate also. King Albert is thirty-nine years old and Queen Elizabeth a year younger. Many Americans have met the king. He spent several months in this country sixteen years ago.

He had dinner in Washington with President McKinley, was entertained at Newport, by Mrs. Potter Palmer and spent considerable time in New York. In St. Louis he spent three days incognito at a hotel as "John Banks, New York."

He has a private fortune of some twenty odd millions besides a sufficiently liberal grant made by the Belgian government.

He and Queen Elizabeth did not have any formal coronation such as other sovereigns have, following the example of Leopold II who gave to the people the large sum, many thousands of dollars, for which they had been taxed, to pay for the coronation. The new king and queen, however, had a state entry into Brussels the day before Christmas five years ago, when the cannon boomed a salute and droes of thousands of their subjects thronged the streets to receive their new rulers. They have three children, Prince Leopold, Prince Charles and little Princess Marie.

The king and queen have been very democratic, easily accessible to all classes of society and they have become so popular that the Socialists who used to demand a republic for Belgium are now seldom heard from.

"The Red Widow."

"The Red Widow," the sparkling musical play which came direct from the Broadway breaking run at the Astor New York theatre, is being produced here by the opera house, Thursday, September 3, is a play by the brilliant and charming J. Gebest. Messrs. Pollock and Wolf are responsible for the book and lyrics, and Mr. Gebest for the musical score.

"The Red Widow," Cicero Hammett Butts, is a retired millionaire, manufacturer of Yonkers, N. Y. U. S. A. He is also a colonel in the National Guards with, to hear him tell it, an international reputation as an army tactician. In London, where he has arrived on a tour around the world, he meets Anna Varvara (the Red Widow) Anna's fascinating and flirty; also she is a member of a band of blood-thirsty nihilists who are seeking the life of the czar a fact that Cicero does not discover until he has had some of the most exciting experiences of his life while endeavoring to escape from the Russian police web in which he became entangled through his infatuation for the female nihilist.

Posen between the Warta and the river Oder.

Bottle Up Garrison.

Of the enormous forces that will be in the field it is reported to be the general plan of the Russian offensive not to try to take the German chain of main forts by storm. Instead the Russians will attempt to isolate each of them, leaving a large enough force at every point to keep the garrisons bottled up and also to prevent any attacks on their flanks or their own lines of communication.

The Russian advance is almost unopposed now, being in strong contrast to the first week of the campaign, when the Russian forces were fighting almost continuously.

Important victories have been won by the Russian troops, according to correspondents, but the Russian general staff has given out such brief reports from the front that only military men can estimate the importance of the successful Russian campaign.

Can Arm 20,000,000 More Men.

London, Aug. 28.—A dispatch to the Post from St. Petersburg comments on the excellence of the Russian army and the inexhaustible supply of men to draw upon. It says further:

"Russia will have no difficulty in finding 20,000,000 men to complete the work begun by its trained fighting forces. Moreover, this is the first time in the memory of men that the Russian army has taken the field with adequate equipment and a sufficiency of supplies, under officers trained in the hard lesson so thoroughly learned in the Japanese campaign."

10,000 British Reported Killed. Germans reaching Courtrai report that 10,000 British were killed in the fighting in Belgium.

Premier Asquith this morning announced that parliament will adjourn on Monday, probably for ten days.

Force Germans to Retire.

Paris, Aug. 28.—The following official bulletin was issued by the war office last night:

"In the Vosges district our troops today resumed the offensive and drove back the Germans who yesterday had forced them to retire on the St. Die side.

The Germans yesterday bombarded St. Die, which is an unfortified town.

"In the region between the Vosges and Nancy our offensive movement has continued uninterruptedly for five days. The German losses have been considerable; 2500 bodies were found on a front of three kilometers (nearly two miles) southeast of Nancy and 4500 bodies on a front of four kilometers in the region of Vitrimont."

Half the Garrison Killed.

"Longwy, a very old fortress, the garrison of which consisted of only one battalion, which had been bombarded August 3, capitulated yesterday, after holding out over twenty-four days. More than half of the garrison was killed or wounded. Lieutenant Colonel Darche, governor of Longwy, has been nominated an officer of the Legion of Honor for heroic conduct in the defense of Longwy."

Germans Repulsed on Meuse.

"On the Meuse our troops have repulsed with great vigor several German attacks. A German flag was taken.

"The Belgian field army attached to Namur and a French regiment which supported it have joined our lines.

"In the north the British have attacked forces greatly superior in number, and were obliged, after brilliant resistance, to withdraw a little in the rear on their right.

"Our armies maintained their positions in Belgium. The army of Antwerp, by its offensive, has drawn off and held before it several German divisions."

French Claim Success.

The war office maintains that the French have been successful in the Vosges campaign. Seven thousand German dead were alleged to have been seen in one district there after a French victory.

Longwy, the Iron gate to France surrendered yesterday to the Germans only after half the little garrison were destroyed, says a statement.

Paris had ordered its surrender by wireless.

British Troops Change Position.

London, Aug. 28.—In spite of all efforts made by Ambassador Gortard at Berlin to locate Mrs. T. J. Preston her husband and her three children, no trace of the missing Americans has yet been found. Mrs. Preston, now the wife of Prof. Preston, of Princeton, was Mrs. Grover Cleveland. Prof. Preston went into the interior of Germany early in the spring to do some research work for his university. Since the war broke out, not one of the members of the family have been heard from.

London, Aug. 28.—The British press bureau at 12.30 o'clock this morning gave out the following statement: "The French operations of war over a distance of some 250 miles have necessitated certain changes in the position of our troops, who are now occupying a strong line to meet the German advance, supported by the French army on both flanks.

"The morals of both armies appear to be excellent and there is little doubt that they will give good account of themselves in the positions they now hold."

GERMANY PLANS TO CAPTURE U. S.

peace on our terms.

"The possibility must be taken into account that the fleet of the United States will at first not venture into battle, but that it will withdraw into fortified harbors, in order to wait for a favorable opportunity of achieving minor successes. Therefore it is clear that naval action alone will not be decisive against the United States, but that the combined action of navy and army will be required. Considering the great extent of the United States, the conquest of the country by an army of invasion is not possible. But there is every reason to believe that victorious enterprises on the Atlantic coast and the conquest of the most important arteries through which imports and exports pass, will create such an unbearable state of affairs in the whole country that the government will readily offer acceptable conditions in order to obtain peace.

"If Germany begins preparing a fleet of transports and troops for landing purposes at the moment when the battle fleet steams out of our harbors we may conclude that operations on American soil can begin after about four weeks, and it cannot be doubted that the United States will not be able to oppose to us within that time an army equivalent to our own.

"At present the regular army of the United States amounts to 65,000 men, of whom about 30,000 could be disposed of. Of these at least 10,000 are required for watching the Indian territories and for guarding the fortifications on the sea coast. Therefore only about 20,000 men of the regular army are ready for war. Besides, about 100,000 militia are in existence, of whom the larger part did not come up when they were called out during the last year. Lastly the militia is not efficient, it is partly armed with muzzle loaders and its training is worse than its armament.

"As an operation by surprise against America is impossible, on account of the length of time during which the transports are on the way, only the landing can be effected by surprise. Nevertheless, stress must be laid on the fact that the rapidity of the invasion will considerably facilitate victory against the United States, owing to the absence of methodical preparation for mobilization, owing to the inexperience of the personnel, and owing to the weakness of the regular army.

"In order to occupy permanently a considerable part of the United States and to protect our lines of operation so as to enable us to fight successfully against all forces which that country, in the course of time, can oppose to us, considerable forces would be required. Such an operation would be greatly hampered by the fact that it would require a second passage of the transport fleet in order to ship the necessary troops that long distance. However, it seems questionable whether it would be advantageous to occupy a great stretch of the country for a considerable time. The Americans will not feel inclined to conclude peace because one or two provinces are occupied by an army of invasion, but because of the enormous material losses which the whole country will suffer if the Atlantic harbor towns, in which the threads of the whole prosperity of the United States are concentrated are torn away from them one after the other.

"Therefore the task of the fleet would be to undertake a series of large landing operations, through which we are able to take several of these important and wealthy towns within a brief space of time. By interrupting their communications, by destroying all buildings serving the state, commerce and the defense, by taking away all material for war and transport, and, lastly, by levying heavy contributions, we should be able to inflict damage on the United States.

"For such enterprises a small military force will suffice. Nevertheless, the American defense will find it difficult to undertake a successful enterprise against that kind of warfare. Though an extremely well developed railway system enables them to concentrate troops within a short time on the different points on the coast, the concentration of the troops and the time which is lost until it is recognized which of the many threatened points of landing will really be utilized will, as a rule, make it possible for the army of invasion to carry out its operations with almost under the cooperation of the fleet of the point chosen. The corps landed can either take the offensive against gathering hostile forces or withdraw the transports to land at another place.

"It should be said that Germany is the only great power which is able to tackle the United States single handed. England could be victorious on sea, but would not be able to protect Canada, where the Americans could find consolation for their defeat at sea. On the other great powers now possess a fleet of transports required for such an operation."

Notice is hereby given That application will be made to the Public Service Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, by the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania for a certificate of public convenience, evidencing the Commission's approval of an agreement with the Penn Public Service Company for the joint use of poles the public hearing on which will be held in the room of the Commission at Harrisburg, at 10 A.
